GERMANS CLAIM TO HAVE TAKEN NEW POSITIONS IN DRIVE ON FRENCH FORTRESS.

BOMBARDMENT INTENSE

Attacks and Counter Attacks Cause Battle Tide to Zig Zag Back and Forth With No Decision Reached.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, Feb. 29.—Progress for the Germans in their drive toward Verdun in the Woerthe district, was announced by the war office today. The German troops have passed Dieppe, Abaucourt and Blauze, and also have taken Manheimes and Champey.

It is also said that a small armored corps north of Douaumont has been formed by the Germans.

The official announcement gives the total number of unaccounted prisoners taken, as 16,575. There have been captured also 78 cannon and 36 machine guns.

Hard to Hand Fighting.

Paris, Feb. 29.—The bombardment to the north of Verdun is continuing with great intensity.

East of the Meuse last night, there was a resumption of violent local attacks. Near the village of Douaumont the fighting came to a hand to hand encounter. The Germans were repulsed by French troops.

After intense artillery fire, German forces captured the villages of Manheimes and a counter attack brought the French to the western boundary of this location. They now hold Manheimes under their fire.

In Lorraine the Germans succeeded in occupying small sections of French trenches, but they were very shortly driven out from these positions.

Germans Fall into Ruse.

"Do you know about the trick played on the Germans at Caures Wood?" was the question with which a French soldier who had been in the Verdun fighting, introduced today his account of an incident at the front.

"Well, to the north of Verdun," he continued, "a little beyond Beaumont, the Caures Wood. It was a point to which the Germans paid special attention and therefore, everything was done to give them as good a reception as possible.

"While our infantry on the fringe of the wood, kept the enemy in the hands of engineers and his men made their final preparations in the wood, which had been carefully mined before hand. When all was ready, the machine guns in the city. A convinced that our men were holding, after them in the woods, yelling excitedly.

"When the last Frenchman was seen, the Germans, on the other side, some one posted near Beaumont pressed a button. There was a heavy boom and trees mingled with bodies shot into the air. Virtually every man in the enemy in the wood, had been killed."

Shells Fall in Verdun.

Paris, Feb. 29.—Reports from Verdun say that 31 persons of the civilian population have been killed by shells which fell in the city. A small remnant of the population were still reluctant to leave, but were urged by authorities to go, and they crowded on open freight cars, exposed to the snow and cold they departed for a safer region.

One aged woman refused to go, stating she was resigned to die, but her maid, who herself was 72 years old, begged with her and finally placed her in a wheelbarrow and wheeled her eight miles through snow and mud to a place of safety.

A combatant who was in one of the most advanced trenches early in the battle of Verdun has returned to Paris wounded, gives his experiences as follows:

Tells of German Attack.

"At dawn we received orders to leave the trench and to retire to a front position in the Vaux woods, in front of Douaumont. Bending low, we retired the four or five kilometers through the snow, the noise was now in the new trenches, we could not hear one another speak, so great was the noise of the cannonading and when we looked through the periscopes, we could see only heavy clouds of smoke shutting out the sky with jets of fire flashing through the snowflakes. There were about a dozen of us using the trench and we thought the suppressed emotion so much, that at last we all burst out singing and yet none of us could hear a word spoken even by himself.

"Then we saw the Germans coming. They were in such masses, they looked like a black sea. When our guns began to speak, white empty spaces showed among the grey of the advancing masses; but they were soon filled up with fresh patches of grey.

Noise Is Tremendous.

"As they neared our barb wire, our machine guns opened fire, and we had to cover our ears with anything we could find. The noise was now so tremendous, I felt no fear, but I had no feelings or thought, only a sort of buzzing and vertigo.

"When night came on, and the stars lighted up the field, the Germans seemed to be quite close, but it was an optical illusion. They advanced very bravely waving their rifles or leaping as they passed over heaps of dead. I was knocked over by a shell and had my arm broken, and as the trench was completely destroyed, I crawled away and fortunately met an armored automobile which took me to Verdun."

BRITISH WAR OFFICE IS GIVEN LITTLE PRAISE ANYWAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

London, Feb. 29.—The much abused war office, which has popularly been held responsible for the ammunition shortage, the lack of high explosives and machine guns, the Gallipoli failure and all the other military misfortunes of the war, has at last come in for a round of praise from a scientific source.

The war office has been the subject of well-merited obloquy in these columns in connection with its wrong-headed conceptions of the value of pharmaceutical qualifications, says the Pharmaceutical Journal, "and it is our duty, as well as our pleasure, to now record equally deserved praise on the emancipation of the department from its former shackles of ignorance, official pride and traditional prejudice."

The Journal then goes on to commend the appointment of women in military hospitals and better pay and increased sympathy for qualified men and women. It continues: "The enlightened view that the war office will in the future give precedence in recognition over the comparatively untrained will give an immense impetus to effective and thorough methods of technical training, and will simultaneously deal a heavy blow to 'short cutters' and 'flashy' inefficients who have been the bane of British art, science, and commerce."

SHIP ORDER IS EFFECTIVE AT MIDNIGHT

GERMAN STATESMEN INFORM ASSOCIATED PRESS THAT ARMED VESSELS WILL BE ATTACKED.

U. S. WILL NOT YIELD

Germany's Attitude Is Discussed at Today's Cabinet Session But No Change in American Policy Is Announced.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, via London, Feb. 29.—The Associated Press is informed by German's leading statesmen that the new rule of submarine warfare announced in the German memorandum regarding future treatment of armed merchantmen will positively be put in effect at midnight today, Tuesday, Feb. 29.

Note Before President.

Washington, Feb. 29.—The latest formal note from Germany regarding future conduct of submarine warfare, was before President Wilson and his cabinet for consideration today. The note reiterated assurances given in the Lusitania case, declares that those assurances have not been modified by the announced intention to treat armed merchant ships of the enemy as auxiliary cruisers, after midnight tonight, and attempts to justify the new policy by presenting evidence on a dispatch designed to prove Great Britain has used her merchantmen to use their armament for attack in violation of assurances given the United States.

Official indication of what attitude the United States may take regarding the note was expected to follow the cabinet meeting.

What is considered by Secretary Lansing as an all important element in the situation, however, as it now stands, is a copy of the so-called British instructions to shipmasters to hunt for submarines, which have not arrived in Berlin, where they were handed to Ambassador Gerard. Pending their receipt, and a subsequent decision regarding the attitude of the United States the state department is prepared to approach any overt act committed by the Teutonic submarine commanders, in the light of the facts.

Offensive Guns Barred.

The department, it was said, would not act upon the case of an American who sustained injuries aboard a vessel which could be without warning, armed, carried guns for offensive purposes.

It was indicated in British diplomatic circles that the allegations of German submarines attacking British ships was said that British masters had not been instructed to hunt submarines; that they had been told to avoid the craft, and that only in event of the submarine approaching without warning, were the shipmasters authorized to use their guns.

The state department is understood to feel that the possibility of difficulty arising from the new German and Austrian policy is more or less remote. Officials believe that commanders of undersea boats will take particular care to avoid attacking without warning merchant vessels upon which there may be Americans.

Discussed in Cabinet.

Germany's latest communication on submarine warfare was discussed in detail at today's cabinet meeting and at a separate conference between President Wilson and the Secretary of State. But no conclusion was reached. It was decided to await data on the way from Berlin regarding instructions alleged to have been issued by the British admiralty to merchant captains for attack on submarines.

Cabinet members carefully avoided questions of whether Germany's position as outlined by Count von Bernstorff in his note to Secretary Lansing yesterday was acceptable to the American government. It was said that merely the facts were laid before the cabinet, without any effort being made to arrive at a decision.

It was reiterated, however, that the United States would continue to stand firmly behind its position that attacks should not be made on merchantmen armed, or armed for defensive purposes, and would hold Germany accountable if that position is not observed. The chief danger was said by officials to lie in a possible attack on a ship carrying Americans.

Mondell Urges Resolution.

Representative Mondell of Wyoming, republican, in a speech to the house today assailed the administration's foreign policy and urged the passage of his bill, still in committee, to warn Americans, from taking passage on armed merchantmen.

"I can understand how the thoughtless and heedless, the uninformed or emotional," Mr. Mondell said, "might throw hats in the air at any bombastic declaration that the rights of American men must not be abridged without regard to the conditions that brought it forth or to which it was intended to apply."

WATER RATES ARE TO BE REDUCED TO REASONABLE FIGURE

COUNCIL DECIDES AT MEETING
MONDAY TO MAKE PLANS
ACCORDINGLY.

SUCCESSFUL MANAGING

Responsible for the Proposed Alteration in Running Expenses—Other Business Transacted.

WHAT BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS DID AT MEETING

1—Passed resolution which will mean a revision and reduction to average consumer of water under the municipal ownership of water works.
2—Agreed on paving program for this year. South Franklin, from Milwaukee to Madison street, to be of brick on macadam foundation; Oakland avenue to be of concrete or asphaltic concrete, and some form of oiled macadam on three blocks of Mineral Point avenue.
3—Took first steps toward ordering grading and establishing a correct drainage system in large district of Second ward.
4—Considered petitions for sanitary sewers.

Lower water rates for the consumers of Janesville, which will result in a reduction to the average household to benefit the largest number of people, under municipal ownership, was promulgated at the meeting of the board of public works held Monday afternoon, which lasted from three o'clock until after six. The meeting was one of the most important that has been held this year by the city officials, for beside taking preliminary action for the revision of the water rates, plans for paving and grading work was brought before the meeting and discussed at some length.

No exact percentage or figures of reduction were announced by the board members, for the officials took the first steps to accomplish this end, but it was intimated strongly that the lower rates would be in effect by June thirtieth, the end of the fiscal year in the operation of the city water works. During the nine months of municipal ownership the water department, of which Roy C. Cummings is manager, has shown a net profit of over eleven thousand dollars. This fact was before the board of public works. This figure in the first means that allow the city administration to obtain an exact idea of how much it is going to cost the city to operate their plant and the average profit to be obtained.

Under the present rates the city water department had made a noticeable profit after allowing for all possible expenses, depreciating and a sinking fund to pay off the bonded indebtedness. Within a few days' time the city officials will be able to figure out to a fraction how much they can consistently reduce the rates and yet meet all the expected operation expenses without impairing the service, pay off the outstanding bonds, and not run the water works at a loss to be paid for by the taxpayers.

Mayor James A. Fathers stated that an accountant from the railroad commission would go over the books and aid the board in securing data that would be of value in determining what per cent the rates can be lowered. A detailed statement of the receipts from each class of water consumers is desired to determine how much each class can be lowered and enable the administration to prepare a scientific schedule that will meet any emergency or flaw that has developed under municipal ownership.

There was discussion on the most feasible means of eliminating the flat schedule from the new rates by means of offering inducement to have patrons obtain meters. The new system entirely under a meter basis is said to would go a long way to eradicate evils that exist under the old plan.

According to a letter read by Mayor Fathers from the state railroad commission that the city had the right to establish a sinking fund from the profits with which to pay off interest on bonds and the use of themselves when they fall due. Under this policy the city can purchase as many of the outstanding bonds as is advisable, save the interest, and save considerable money by not having to pay them when they expire later year.

The city has the right under the statutes to lower the rates of the water works, but under the present laws they cannot raise them without the approval of the state commission.

To Secure Data.

The first action taken toward the revision of the rates was a resolution passed directing the water department to prepare detailed statements, as desired by the board of public works, to enable the board to revise the rates. Judging from the discussion yesterday the small consumers who are in the vast majority or those who use the average amount of water are going to profit the most under the proposed new schedule. The larger consumers will not have their rates reduced such a percentage as the other class, the board believing that the present rates are low enough. However, information that will be obtained at a later date may be the cause of other changes. There are many facts regarding the new schedule still to be worked out.

Under the present management of the water works, this department is kept absolutely separate from the other city departments. Separate books, funds and accounts are maintained throughout, and once a month the board of public works meet and transact business necessary for the operation of the plant. The transactions pass the board much in a similar manner.

Grading Work.
Grading will be done in the Second ward this year, which will be one of the most important jobs to be undertaken by the city. It is proposed to grade the greatest share of the property around the district of Cornelia and Hyatt streets for the purpose of obtaining a correct drainage of water with the future view of building a large concrete storm sewer on Glen street to the river to carry off the water. Water during the storms and thawing at the present time runs in many places. The drainage problem is a serious drawback to the property owners in this district. Plans for this work were prepared by City Engineer C. V. Kierulff and presented to the board, goes to show that the city will have a big task on their hands. Many of the streets will have to be cut down to conform to the established grade and this excavation dirt will be used to fill up several large hollows and fills which now prevent the water from running down its natural course to the river.

An improvement of Vista avenue, which was started last year, will be completed this year, according to the present plans. There is an immense street and afford better drainage and was recommended by the board that a sanitary sewer be considered on Yuba street, but no final action was taken. No other petitions for sewers were noted.

Paving Schedule.
When the discussion for paving plans came up, three streets were mentioned for the coming year: Oakland avenue, South Franklin and three blocks of Mineral Point avenue. Bluff street may be acted upon at a later date. The plan for the paving work is as fast as possible to allow the letting of bids to contractors, the more competition there is among the bidders, and consequently better prices are offered. There is possibility that the stone crusher will not be operated by the city at all this summer, as the cost of opening the crusher for a short period of time has proven too expensive.

For Oakland avenue concrete or asphaltic concrete will be considered. There is not much difference in cost between the two types of material at moderate expenses. Asphaltic concrete is a pavement laid upon a concrete base with an asphalt top course for traffic. Two courses of concrete is a more permanent material that the board would consider for this avenue. It was pointed out that Oakland avenue is the most logical street in the city to place concrete under the conditions of semi-heavy traffic and that it would be the cheapest of the long run for the property owners. The street was torn up last year when a storm sewer was constructed to the river from Main street and the roughness is in urgent need of an improvement.

Brick for Franklin.
For Franklin street brick on macadam base will be used from Milwaukee street down to Galena street. Last year it was voted to lay concrete here but because of a shortage in the ward funds the work was held over. The reason for the heavy traffic in this city and the heavy traffic of automobiles and the day of the auto truck is fast coming. Experience has proven conclusively that plain macadam streets are not sufficient to withstand the traffic of automobiles and auto trucks in this city and the maintenance cost soon eats up the saving accomplished when the paving is first laid.

On Mineral Point avenue the bad condition of the street demands some form of an improvement. It was agreed that some form of oil macadam or a macadam base with a Washington street that would not be too expensive to the property owners. A heavy crushed stone pavement with oil laid after each course to be rolled may be adopted for this street.

ELK POOL WINNERS ARE LOSERS' GUESTS

Al. Rotstein's Team Is Host to William McNeil's Players at Grand Hotel Last Night.

Winners and losers of the Elks' club recent pool tournament banqueted last night at the Grand Hotel. Manager William McNeil, who was also captain of the winning cue artists, had prepared an excellent dinner, to which an attendance of between forty and fifty guests from the Elks' club and other class, the board believing that the present rates are low enough. However, information that will be obtained at a later date may be the cause of other changes. There are many facts regarding the new schedule still to be worked out.

Under the present management of the water works, this department is kept absolutely separate from the other city departments. Separate books, funds and accounts are maintained throughout, and once a month the board of public works meet and transact business necessary for the operation of the plant. The transactions pass the board much in a similar manner.

Grading Work.
Grading will be done in the Second ward this year, which will be one of the most important jobs to be undertaken by the city. It is proposed to grade the greatest share of the property around the district of Cornelia and Hyatt streets for the purpose of obtaining a correct drainage of water with the future view of building a large concrete storm sewer on Glen street to the river to carry off the water. Water during the storms and thawing at the present time runs in many places. The drainage problem is a serious drawback to the property owners in this district. Plans for this work were prepared by City Engineer C. V. Kierulff and presented to the board, goes to show that the city will have a big task on their hands. Many of the streets will have to be cut down to conform to the established grade and this excavation dirt will be used to fill up several large hollows and fills which now prevent the water from running down its natural course to the river.

BUY NEW PLANT SITE; STILL RAISING FUND

TWO AND ONE-HALF ACRES AT EASTERN END OF WESTERN AVENUE SECURED—IS ON RAILWAY SPUR.

SECURE NEARLY $5,000

But Small Amount Remains To Be Secured By Finance Committee—Delay Start on Building.

Janesville's new farm tractor manufacturing plant will be located at the eastern end of Western avenue, just off Franklin street on the site of the old tobacco warehouse known as the "black warehouse" which was burned to the ground several years ago. The site was selected by the committee in charge of this work and the property, two and one-half acres, was secured at a very nominal sum.

The fact that the spur line of the Chicago and North Western railway company which serves the Janesville Machine Co., the Janesville Bar Wire, the Hohenadel canning factory and the Caloric companies is directly adjacent to the property adds to its value from an industrial standpoint. The proximity of the sidetrack along which an expenditure of between one hundred and fifty and three hundred dollars, though a considerable sum, movement considered, the site is a bargain as could be obtained in the city. It is not expected that ground will be bought for the erection of the building for fifteen or twenty days. It was first thought by the committee that it would be a good idea to start work at once but later this was deemed inadvisable because of the unsettled weather conditions. It was felt that excavation work would entail great labor cost and that great danger to the cement foundations would occur were work started at this date.

Practically every business man in the city has been canvassed by the finance committee. When this bureau met this afternoon to check up on the morning's work it was found that the plan practically settled the bringing of the plant here. But a small amount of the five thousand dollars necessary for the erection and the building remains to be subscribed by the Janesville business and laboring men. Chairman Frank P. Croak and members of the committee, expected to have no difficulty in raising the remaining sum this afternoon.

It was announced this morning for the benefit of those who desire to extend their services in the erection of the building that the most complete manner of distribution of the work, laborers and others could help the building of the plant by either telephoning or leaving their names to the offices of three contractors, Ford, Boone and Schoof, W. R. Hayes and Joseph Denning.

CLARENCE BROWN WEDS ESCANABA GIRL

Marriage Took Place Unknown to Many Friends of Janesville Boy at Marquette, Mich.

News of the marriage at Marquette, Mich., of Clarence L. Brown, a brother to Louis Brown, day clerk at the Grand Hotel, and Miss Gertrude Behner, an Escanaba, Mich. girl, has been received in this city. Accompanying the announcement received by Louis Brown was the following clipping from the Marquette Chronicle:

"Miss Gertrude Behner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Behner, of Escanaba, and Clarence L. Brown, of this city, slipped quietly away from their friends Saturday night and yielded to the wiles of that little winged fellow of romance we all know so well. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Buchholz in the rectory of St. Peter's cathedral at 12 o'clock noon.

"While the numerous friends, both in this city and in Escanaba, had vague suspicions that Daniel Cupid had made arrangements for the near future, the bride and groom were not possessed the slightest knowledge of the marriage until Saturday evening, when the news was conveyed in a whisper to a very confidential friend and subsequently, and only naturally, the glad tidings were not long in going the rounds.

"Mrs. Brown is a popular Escanaba girl, having resided in that city for a number of years. Mr. Brown has been a resident of this city for but a few months but even in that short period has demonstrated a pleasing facility in gaining a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. They will reside in this city."

Mr. Brown is well known in Janesville and a host of friends here wish him the utmost success in his latest venture.

DESERTS WHITE WIFE AT TRIBE'S BEHEST

POW WOW CAUSES "BIG SLEEP" WHICH STRANGES INDIAN CHIEF FROM PALE FACE BRIDE.

CIRCUS ROMANCE ENDS

Judge Grimm Grants Divorce to Woman Who Announces She Will Become a Movie Actress.

Behind the divorce decree issued yesterday by Judge George Grimm to Ella M. Chief, a separation for the Janesville woman from her husband, Sioux Indian husband, lies one of the most weird tales ever entered in the annals of the Rock county circuit court. It is a story of the peculiar customs and traditions of the Indians, customs and traditions which have escaped obliteration in the rapid trend of civilization and progress and which have been a source of much trouble to the group of redmen who eke out an existence in the Pine Ridge county in South Dakota in the foothills of the Black Hills.

The Sioux was a wild west circus performer when the woman met him. She also was travelling with the circus. It was the 101 Ranch. They were thrown together much and soon a courtship opened. At Chilton, Wis., on July 11, 1913, they were married. A month later, August 13, 1913, and since that time they have been separated. And since that time Chief has been neglecting his duty to do, has neglected to provide the plaintiff with any support.

On the grounds of non-support Judge Grimm granted the divorce.

It appeared in the testimony given by Ella M. Chief that the Indian's brethren raised strenuous objections to his pact with the white woman and constant mutterings of anger against her tribe, with its queer and peculiar customs.

The constant appeal of his tribesmen with the circus finally induced Chief to return to the foothills of the Black Hills when the season closed. Thereby were blasted the hopes of the white woman to quit the life of the big top and settle and live in the mode of civilization. But she returned with her then began a tale which reads like fiction.

Conditions with the Indians were even worse then while the two were with the circus. The entire tribe was opposed to the marriage and made matters unbearable for the woman.

Big Chief White Horse, a brother of the trouble and schemed to wipe out the Indian dishonor which his brother had brought upon the tribe with his marriage. According to the testimony of Mrs. Chief, her husband was taken up into the foothills to a secret spring where he was to be killed.

Chief did not state. The Indian braves on mass attended the ritual. Some days later they returned to their tribe and the woman was left alone with her husband's dead. But they would not permit her to attend the funeral. Matters were daily becoming darker for the woman and upon the advice of the white man's shock the dust of the redmen's camp from her skirts and came east.

The rapid trend of events after she had gone to the marriage with her husband's disappearance with his brothers and the subsequent story of his death and the funeral at which she was not permitted, made her suspicious of the whole thing.

Chief began her divorce proceedings. She has been a dressmaker here for some time. She announced in court yesterday that she would leave for Chicago to enter the movies as a film actress.

"I wonder," mused an attorney who had listened with interest to the woman's tale, "if she's going to take the lead in a western, which is about her own experiences."

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule contain a large quantity of plain syrup. A pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 24 cents, a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it lessens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with quinine, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

They sat down, each half facing the room. Alix caught her breath. "Whirling the old air?" asked Collingford.

"No," answered Alix. "Only sighing. I feel so out of it and that all ways makes one sigh whether one wants to be in it or not."

"You're Not Looking Very Well, Alix."

Alix paused. "Go on," said Collingford.

"There are only a few men in the room, but almost all of these women have husbands. The husbands are in two tens—past and future. There must be a present but it is nebulous. I didn't know before but I know now that in time these women will go back or forward to their husbands. Some day they will get dizzy and fall and the shock will wake them up."

"You see, you understand, you are prophetic," said Collingford, smiling.

"But I do not tower like your Bodsky," said Alix and then bit her tongue at the slip.

A shadow seemed to fall on them. The room's high, delicate paneling and the painted oval of the ceiling seemed to hover over a suddenly darkened emptiness. The hum and chatter of the throng became little and far away. Collingford and Alix felt as though they sat alone and yet not alone. Collingford nodded as though Alix had spoken. "Yes," he said, "Bodsky has come back to us. Don't regret it. I don't know how it is with you but I feel that we two are alone with him and that it's worth while. He's come on us like a cloud."

"But I like clouds," he continued, "big black clouds. If it were not for them you couldn't see the lightning or hear the thunder. They make lightning and thunder—the roar and the voice of the gods."

"Bodsky was elemental. He was an element. He could not produce but he could make fertile the lives of lesser men. I've sat at his feet ever since the first time he spoke to me. I didn't know I was doing it but I can see it now. And the result is this: Bodsky couldn't go home. But I can and I'm going home before I've seen the whole world. Only—I wish I could take you with me."

"There, there," said Alix, playfully, but her eyes were soft. "We must go now or you will miss your ship."

As Alix and Collingford left the dining room she said, "They weren't all butterflies after all. I saw a man and a woman."

"Not really!" said Collingford.

"Who?"

"Alan Wayne and Dora Tennel."

At Alan's name Collingford's face lit up with interest. "Ten Percent Wayne, eh? Yes, you're right. He's a man. And Dora Tennel, ex-Lady Braeme. Yes, she's a woman too—in a way."

"Has she a tarnished reputation?"

Collingford stopped short in his stride and looked keenly at Alix. "My dear lady," he said, "that is a question one does not put to a man. However, it doesn't embarrass me to answer it in this case. She has not. What on earth put it into your head?"

"I don't know," said Alix. "Oh, yes I do. I remember. Someone told me once that Alan surrounded himself with tarnished reputations."

Each followed the train of his own thoughts until they reached the pier. Alix did not get out of the cab. She leaned from the window and said good-by. Collingford held her hand and her eyes long, then he turned away and hurried into the elevator.

When Alix got home she sat down and wrote a note to Alan—just a line to tell him that she was ready and wished to see him. He came the following afternoon. At first he was a little awkward, straining just the least too much not to betray his nervousness. But the sight of Alix put him at his ease. She had become a true woman—true in the sense of honor—and she was tempered as steel, but soft with the softness of motherhood. About her there was the peace of an inner shrine. She drew him into it unhesitatingly and he suddenly felt unclean just as he had felt unworthy on that other day when he had recoiled from Nance's loving arms around his neck.

"You're not looking very well, Alan," said Alix when he was seated.

"No, I'm not on the top of the wave just now," replied Alan. "Touch of river fever. It's like memory—a hard thing to shake."

"I'm not trying to shake mine," said Alix calmly. "My memories have made me."

"No wonder you don't quarrel with them," said Alan in frank admiration.

"Alan, when are you going to come back? Don't you ever tire of life as a variety show? Wouldn't you rather have one real steady star in life than a whole lot of furnished stick ones?"

Alan jumped to his feet, stung, his hands in his coat pockets and started walking up and down the somber room. They were in the library. "A steady star," he repeated. "What a find that would be! I've raised many a star on my horizon, Alix, but the longer I look at 'em the more they twinkle back. It's easier to down conscience than to down blood."

"In the end," said Alix, "a man must down blood or it down him—down him irretrievably. Blood unchecked is just common beast."

"Do you think I don't know it?" flashed Alan. "Each day I find an old haunt denied to me. I am ill at ease. My world has left yours behind. There is a pale. Behind it lies Red Hill. Do you know I haven't been to the Hill for three years? Behind it lies Nance, the faithfullest, most trusting foster-sister a waster ever had. And now you. You lie behind it and toy with my soul through the bars."

Alix sprang to her feet and laid strong, nervous hands on Alan's shoulders. She shook him and turned him so that he faced the light. Alan did not laugh. There was fire in Alix's eyes. "You little thing," she said tensely, "not to see that the bars are down."

He turned under her hands and she let him go. He stood looking out of the window at the bare trees. Alix watched him. "Alan, you can come to the Hill tonight. They—we—are all going to be together here. It's Clem's birthday. If you can feel the pale, that's enough for me. I want you to be with us."

"Alix, believe me or not, it's because I feel the pale that I won't come. If there's a shin sailing for the ends of the earth before night it shall carry me. This big city isn't big enough to hold all the Hill and leave me room to wander outside."

"Then why—why—"

"I'll tell you. The last time I saw J. Y., he said to me among other things, 'Yesterday Clem was crying because you had not come to the house. I try to think, Alan, that it is because Clem is there that you have not come. Well, there it is in a nutshell. I bear the mark of the beast. Do you think I want Clem to see it?'"

Alan's hands were locked behind him. He turned from the window.

"Alix, I can't see Clem yet. She is expecting me. I told her that the better half of me would look her up as soon as I got back. But what if someone that doesn't know my better half at all should see me riding—walking with Clem? I can't risk that. Do you understand?"

"But oh, Alan," said Alix. "If you could only see Clem now. She's glorious. Why it's three years—three years since you saw her. You used to think me beautiful!"

"Used?" protested Alan, casting a valuing glance at Alix's pale beauty.

"Well," conceded Alix, "you think me beautiful. Beside Clem with her heaps of brown hair and deep blue eyes. I am nothing. I am worse—I am a doll. And she was born with a strange wisdom and strength of her own. The world has never reached her—will never reach her. She's made her own world and she's made it right. And yet—the wisdom in her deep eyes, Alan. She knows—she knows it all—and you know that she knows. Only, faith sits enthroned."

"Faith sits enthroned," repeated Alan; "that's why I can't come tonight." He looked around for his hat and stick.

"By the way," said Alix, "why J. Y. and why Mrs. J. Y.? I've always wondered."

"I don't know," said Alan. "I've always wondered too, I suppose. But here's the judge. He can tell you."

"Tell what?" asked the judge as he walked in and took Alix's outstretched hand.

"Why there's no Mr. Wayne and Mrs. Wayne—only J. Y."

"And you don't know, Alan?" asked the judge. "Well, I'll tell you. Mr. Wayne and Mrs. Wayne—they were Alan's father and his young wife. Their life was a hot flame that suddenly smothered itself in the clouds of its own smoke. The memory of the clouds passed with them but the flame burns on in the hearts of all who knew them. It will burn on. That's why J. Y. is J. Y. and that's why it will always be J. Y. and Mrs. J. Y. to the Hill."

Alan said good-by in a hurried low voice and started for the door but the judge called to him: "Just a moment, Alan, I'm coming with you."

The judge found Alan waiting for him on the steps as he hurried out: "What are you doing for the rest of the afternoon?" he asked.

"I'm sailing for South America if there's a connection."

"The judge looked up surprised. 'I didn't know you had anything urgent on.' They walked on in silence for some minutes, then the judge said, hesitatingly, 'Alan, you're rushed, of course, but if you could—if you could do one thing—put it down to my account. Just drop in and see J. Y.

for a minute. Somehow I feel that you can't see J. Y. the way he really is. But if you knew him, Alan, the way I do, you'd know it's an honor for any man to shake hands with J. Y. Wayne. He has a rare thing—an untainted hand. There is a tale of 'change to the effect that a firm was saved from a smash because J. Y. walked up to its head and shook hands with him on the floor.'

"I don't know," said Alan, "that J. Y. wants to shake hands with me." He spoke almost questioningly.

"I don't know that he wants to, either, my boy. But I do know this. He's a busy man, but there's never a day that he's too rushed to think of you."

Alan stopped and held out his hand. "I am much obliged to you," he said. "I'm sorry I didn't think of it myself. I'm off to his office now, as soon as I've telephoned Switson."

J. Y. received his nephew with outstretched hand. His rugged face was lit up with the rare smile that came to it seldom, for it was the far-dung ripple—the visible expression of a deep emotion.

"I just dropped in, sir," said Alan, "to say good-by. I'm off again to South America. Africa seems to be taking a year off."

They sat and looked at each other for a moment and then J. Y. arose and held out his hand again. "If that's the case," he said, "I won't keep you. Good-by and good luck."

"Good-by, sir," said Alan.

As he reached the door J. Y. spoke again. "Alan," he said, "I'm glad you dropped in."

"I am too, sir," said Alan.

"But," it was objected, "it is a well-known fact that you never reach your office before 11 o'clock and that you quit at 2 and spend the rest of the day playing golf."

"Quite true," said the magnate. "The secret of my success, as I was about to say when you interrupted me, is permitting industry and strict attention to business on the part of my employees."

"Bobbie," said Uncle John, "how many are two times three?"

"Five," answered the boy promptly.

"No, Bobby, you are mistaken. Two times three are six."

"Tain't neither," protested Bobby. "Two times three are five, and if you'll come down to the corner with me I'll prove it to you."

And taking his uncle by the hand he led him to the corner and pointed triumphantly to a sign on a fruit stand: "Apples, 3 cents each. Two for 5."

"Did that last snowstorm cause you any inconvenience?"

"Some. I wasn't able to get into town for a week, but then our cook

Marrying for Money

Ortrude Townsend Plays the Role of My Lady Bountiful

"What is she like?" asked Dudley when Marian walked down to meet him the day that Ortrude's cousin arrived.

"Oh, pleasant enough. I should probably have liked her had she not been related to Ortrude," Marian tucked her hand into Dudley's arm and said the words with a smile.

"Ortrude has her best company manner on and the beauty of her disposition is with large all over her face. The little mixt When she says Marian in her honied tones have a fierce desire to slap her," Marian's eyes blazed.

"My, but you are a spiteful," laugh, "Do you suppose she is going to try to give the impression of sweet domesticity to this young innocent?"

Marian shrugged her shoulders to express her entire ignorance of the workings of Ortrude's brain. They walked along in silence for a time.

"Is there anything startling about any lady's wardrobe?" asked Dudley as they neared the house.

"I should say not. Her clothes are very ordinary. If this is a specimen, she is not the one who ran her father into bankruptcy," replied the girl as they turned into the hall.

The whole house had a festive air and it was evident that Ortrude was exerting herself to impress her young cousin with the gorgeousness of her surroundings. An elaborate dinner was served instead of the usual evening meal. Jacob was very gracious and expressed a hope that the young lady would enjoy her stay with them. Altogether the first meal went off very well.

"I am glad I have my lessons as an excuse for not sticking around," said Marian, dropping into slang.

So it happened that Ortrude and Adelaide Blakeley were left alone to plan the pleasures of the coming month. They strolled out to a seat under the big maple in the side yard, directly under Marian's window.

The young lady seated with elbows on desk and a geometry spread out before her making a half-hearted attempt to get her lesson. The blur of voices floated up to her. Suddenly she heard Adelaide say in great excitement:

"Not a real party, all for me? I never had such a thing done in my life. I have read of such things in the papers. But—" her voice died away.

"But what?" asked Ortrude. "I would shame you, you who have everything lovely to wear. I have nothing you would not blush to see me in. Marian was leaning toward the open door to hear the reply.

"Never you mind about that. I will see that you have something suitable to wear. The girls here do not dress much. Marian has nothing but the commonest things. But, I want you to make an impression. Ortrude was evidently enjoying the role of lady bountiful.

"We are not near enough alike in size or me to wear your clothes," objected Adelaide.

"We can have something of mine altered, perhaps. Or—I will make something for you. Leave that to me," gazed sweetly up at Marian.

Then it flashed over Marian that what was eavesdropping and she rose and moved about the room to call her presence to the two women below. The voices dropped to a whisper and they soon rose and returned to the porch.

A Tic. What causes excessive and irregular winking of the eyelids?

Answer—It is a habit spasm, called a tic. It may be cured by a course of exercise and inhibition.

A Tubercular Gland. Would you advise complete removal or mere drawing off of the pus from a suppurated gland in the neck?

Answer—Mere aspiration, if anything plus an outdoor regimen, as for tuberculosis of the lungs.

Household Hints

Cathartic for Children—Senna four drams; manna, one ounce; Rochelle salts, one ounce; fennel seed, bruised, 1/2 drams; boiling water, eight ounces; sugar, eight ounces; oil of wintergreen to flavor. Pour water on ingredients, cover and macerate until cool; strain and add sugar; dissolve by agitation and add oil of wintergreen to flavor. Bottle for use.

For Sore Throat—Dissolve five cents' worth camphor gum in one pint kerosene oil. If patient is old enough to gargle, gargle one teaspoonful. Spit out, repeat in fifteen minutes. If a small child, swab out the throat every fifteen minutes. Will better after the first application. Will not injure if one happens to swallow it.

Scarf on Baby's Head—In the winter time when baby has a cold, the mother is afraid to wash his head and he becomes very dirty, which is very injurious to the scalp and hair. Take a warm cloth, sprinkle powdered borax on it and rub gently down through the hair; it will remove all dirt and give health to the hair. It will not give baby a cold.

For Uric Acid—Juice of one-half lemon and fifteen grains bicarbonate of soda in water-glass of water one hour before breakfast.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

For Lice on House Plants—Steep tobacco leaves in water. When cool sprinkle plant with water. When cool sprinkle plant with water.

To Dispose of Old Tin Cans—Fill them with coal, and when you have a hot fire in the furnace, put them in.

Boys' Blouses—Take a piece of half-inch tape, one inch longer than the boy's waist measure. Run in casing of blouse and fasten both ends with just enough stitches to hold them.

Back of Blouse—Put three or four stitches in casing and pull tape through. Pull blouse on the boy, button and pull tape out through the casing.

Burn Soft Coal—Fill a number of sacks at a time and save having to handle the coal so often. To replenish the fire, just drop in a more convenient and cleaner than the old way.

Winter Squash—Cut squash, remove seeds and steam or boil soft. Remove meat from shell, add butter, salt and pepper, reheat and serve.

Baked Squash—Cut in pieces for serving, remove seeds and stringy part, brush with molasses, season with salt and pepper, bake until soft. Add butter and serve in shell.

Lemon Mincemeat—One-half cup butter, four large lemons, four apples, one-fourth pound chopped raisins, place lemons in cold water and boil until tender. Change water twice; drain and pound to a paste; add apples, lemon peel, butter, raisins, etc., and put in a jar.

Spiced Layer Cake—Do not attempt this cake with molasses. If possible get pure sorghum that is six months or more old—makes finest kind of fruit cake. Take one cup sorghum molasses, one cup light brown sugar, one cup sweet cream, one cup raisins, two cups cups flour, one teaspoon soda (scant); cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon, place in two layers and put together with icing. Keep several days before using.

Corn Meal Griddle Cakes—Three-quarters cup granulated sugar, half tablespoon butter, half teaspoon salt (cream thoroughly); add one egg (beat thoroughly); one cup sweet milk, one cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 cups yellow corn meal, half teaspoon vanilla extract; beat thoroughly and drop from tablespoon into skillet. With enough grease to cook nicely. These are very good with maple syrup.

Potato Cakes—Four eggs (yolks and whites beaten separately), 1 1/2 tablespoons cold water, one small cup sugar, one-half cup potato flour, one teaspoon baking powder, salt. Beat sugar and yolks of eggs together. Put pinch of salt in whites of eggs. Beat stiff and add to yolks and sugar. Then add one-half cup potato flour and one teaspoon baking powder. Bake in moderate oven twenty-five to thirty minutes.

FAMOUS MEDICAL FAKER DIES PENNILESS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Johannesburg, South Africa, Feb. 28.—Sequah, the most famous itinerant quack of his time, who died here penniless at the age of 70, went through a fortune estimated at $500,000 obtained from the credulous.

Sequah was born in London, but posed as a red Indian. He had remarkable gifts as a showman and a powerful personality that enabled him to work his cures. He inspired faith, and people to him like a magnet and exercised a certain spell of a hypnotic nature over them. Touring the country in magnificent style, he would have the largest hall in a place, work up enthusiasm with a brass band and then proceed to work his miracles of cure. He was an exceptionally fine elocutionist, a fluent speaker and something of a singer—talents he later put to use on the variety stage. After giving up the medicine business, he turned to the circus, where he was a great success. He could pull the most obstinate tooth, even if he took a piece of jaw bone with it, and then make the patient swear before the audience that the operation was painless. When he applied his magic oils against rheumatism, he gave the patient such a severe rubbing that the original pain was forgotten. Many patients who hobbled on the stage came off without crutches, owing to faith and excitement. But relief was, of course, only temporary.

Sequah, whose real name is said to have been Hartley, reached the zenith of his fame in the early '90s. He was everywhere denounced as an impostor, but that only increased his following among the credulous masses.

GEMS ON EVERY FINGER, SHE HAS A FEW STOLEN; SOCIETY WOMAN UNDER ARREST

Mrs. Clara Baldwin Stocker wearing her jeweled stockings. At left, Mrs. Stocker's bejeweled hand.

Mrs. Clara Baldwin Stocker, daughter of "Lucky" Baldwin and heiress to half his big fortune, recently was robbed of diamonds to the value of $100,000. She has caused to be placed under arrest Mrs. Lecta Northam, dashing widow of the late Angeles political leader.

She was with Mrs. Northam when she discovered her loss. Mrs. Stocker is probably the most bejeweled woman in America. She wears rings on every finger and often on her thumbs. She has gems around her neck and in her stockings. She says that buying diamonds is her favorite pastime.

THE HUMOROUS SIDE.

The humorous side is always good. No other should appeal. A sense of humor smooths the way and helps us with our spirit. You can't succeed and be a grouch. I care not what your game, and he that's always out of sorts, has but himself to blame. A joke, a smile, a hearty laugh, will throw you into gear, and kill the pessimistic bug and down the phantom fear. So put it over with a joke. Don't see the other side. Cut fret and worry with a laugh, and you will turn the tide. The anxious man is not the one to whom you pin your hopes. He shadow boxes till all in, then flounders on the ropes. He's always going some, and yet he don't seem to arrive. His poise is out of kilter, and he don't know he's alive. He hits at all the wide ones, he has lost his batting eye, nobody home and no one cares for any such a guy. Just cultivate a sense of fun, you'll find it worth your while, the world reflects the sunshine, and will reproduce your smile. If you should find that you are shy on sense of humor, just play you have it, learn to laugh; it is your only hope. The man who laughs is welcome thrice, for him we have a place. But let the Grouch grow whiskers so that he can catch the flies that hide his face.

CELEBRATE PROSPERITY DAY IN MANY CITIES.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 29.—Wisconsin business men made the most of the extra day of the year, set apart as "Prosperity Day." In nearly every city plans were made to observe the day in a proper manner.

Probably the most elaborate preparations for the day were made at Wausau. A mass meeting was held in the opera house last night. Admission was free. Addresses were made and an entertainment given.

The city was decorated today and are sure winners.

Has the Habit. "Is she a bride?" "An inveterate one."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Can't Understand English. The number of otherwise intelligent, conscientious people who fall into the habit of talking in the presence of their children about the latest just as if they were incapable of understanding the English language is a thing which is perennially astonishing to me.

They talk about the child's love affairs and then they wonder that he learns to be shy about matters of sentiment and to form the habit of never taking his parents into his confidence on such matters—a habit which may cause much unhappiness some day.

Are to Blame. They chronicle the child's bright sayings and then are displeased and censorious when he becomes smart and self-conscious.

They exploit the child's thoughts about death and God and all the mysteries about which, after all, we know little more than they, and then wonder that the child turns to look up the secret places of his heart against them.

It is as if we roughly pulled open a delicate flower and then complained when we found the petals were bruised and marred.

To see a child's mind unfold is like watching the development of a beautiful flower only infinitely more fascinating. Let us be careful how we lay the rude touch of our laughter and our exploitation upon these wonderful blossoms.

Up His Seeds But. When a child plants a seed and then digs it up again in a few days to find it is growing, we laugh at him with glib superiority.

Wasn't the mother of that little boy doing something just as childish, just as self-defeating?

She implanted a faith in her child's head by teaching him to play God and telling him that his prayers meant something. And then by laughing at his trusting acceptance of her teachings, she dug up the seed she herself had planted.

Of course that child's faith in prayer was shaken by what he heard. He is an intelligent child and neither dear nor blind.

They Seem to. Think Their Children Can't Understand English.
